California's Carbon Monoxide Safety Law

Protecting California Families from the "Silent Killer"

In May 2010, an important public safety measure was signed into law requiring all California homes to be equipped with carbon monoxide alarms. Note: CO alarms are required IN ADDITION to smoke alarms and are not intended to replace them. Carbon monoxide (CO) is known as the "Silent Killer" because it is an odorless, colorless and tasteless gas that can catch its victims completely unaware. CO is the leading cause of accidental poisoning deaths in the United States. CO poisoning can cause severe brain, lung and heart injuries and can lead to death.

The only safe way to know if there is CO in your home is to arm yourself or your family with a working CO alarm.
